THE NEW YORKER

GOINGS ON ABOUT TOWN: ART

MARTIN SOTO CLIMENT

Best known for his poetic arrangements of everyday objects, the Mexican artist makes art from used car windshields in his new series, “Mariposas Migratorias (Migratory Butterflies).” The sculptures lean against the wall in pairs, where their overlapping forms suggest wings, or rest on the floor in circular patterns that may remind viewers that a mariposa is also a flower. Two shattered windows lend an air of peril, as if to illustrate André Breton’s proclamation “Beauty will be convulsive or not at all.” Through March 2.

Date: Through March 2
